The Peterson Institute for International Economics provides timely, objective analysis of and concrete solutions to key international economic problems.

"There is no institute anywhere in the world... that comes close to having the breadth and depth that the [Peterson] Institute for International Economics has in its devotion to international economic studies all over the world."

Stuart Eizenstat
Former Deputy Secretary of the Treasury and Undersecretary of State

"No one has led analysis and discussion of international economics like the Peterson Institute."

Tom Keene
Host of Bloomberg "Surveillance"

"...research institutes vary widely in both quality and honesty. Among the best on both counts is the [Peterson] Institute for International Economics."

Paul R. Krugman
Professor of Economics and International Affairs, Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton University

"The Peterson Institute does the single best job of think tanks in this town, hands down, of having the best audience. The discussions that go on here are tremendous."

Maya MacGuineas
President of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget

"In terms of [the Peterson Institute for International Economics'] ability to shape policy discussion and influence the outcome, there isn't an organization outside government that can touch it."

Steve Pearlstein
Washington Post

"This is a really unique platform for challenging brainstorming and intellectual exchanges."

Antonik C. Samaras
Prime Minister of the Hellenic Republic

"I don't think there have been many institutions outside the government, if any, that have had the same kind of impact on global economic thinking as the [Peterson] Institute for International Economics."

Lawrence H. Summers
Charles W. Eliot University Professor and President Emeritus at Harvard University, former Secretary of Treasury and Director of the National Economic Council

"...the emblematic think tank of our time."

Jean-Claude Trichet
Chairman of the Group of Thirty, former President, European Central Bank, former Governor, Banque de France, former Director of the Treasury, government of France

"One of the things that has always astounded me about [the Institute] is they always have a book coming out about the subject that you just realized was important."

David Wessel
Wall Street Journal and Brookings Institution

"...without any doubt the preeminent organization in the world operating outside government and outside universities...in analysis of international economic problems. Its publications over the years have been an invaluable reference source for all journalists working the field..."

Martin Wolf
Chief economics commentator, Financial Times

"One of the reasons I’ve enjoyed being at the Peterson Institute [for International Economics] is that you find places that will now and then have a problem that do scholarship. It is very rare to find one that really combines the two in a very effective way."

Robert B. Zoellick
Chairman, International Country Advisors, Goldman Sachs & Company
The Peterson Institute for International Economics is a private, non-profit institution for rigorous, intellectually open, and indepth study and discussion of international economic policy. Its purpose is to identify and analyze important issues. The Institute attempts to anticipate emerging issues and to be ready with practical ideas, presented in useful and accessible formats, to inform and shape public debate. Its audience includes government officials and legislators, business and labor leaders, management and staff at international organizations, university-based scholars and their students, other research institutions and nongovernmental organizations, the media, and the public at large. It addresses these groups globally from its base in Washington, DC.

The Institute’s staff of about 60 includes 25 research fellows, as well as a dozen non-resident fellows, all distinguished for their expertise on the policy and economic outlook, inflation, labor, macroeconomic policy, current priorities include global supply chains and multinational investments; the growing role of China in the world economy; globalization, inequality, and unemployment; the recurrence of financial crises; national and international financial regulations; trade negotiations at the multilateral, regional, and bilateral levels; and possible reforms of the international monetary system. The Institute’s agenda emphasizes international trade policy. Its staff have written more than 1,400 articles, book chapters, monographs, briefings, and speeches, plus 500 speeches, presentations, and interviews. The Institute sponsored 170 detailed reports on the causes and effects of the 2008–2009 financial crisis; and co-sponsored: The post-crisis economic recovery; an international comparison; and a study of the role of government in the financial system.

The Institute is widely viewed as nonpartisan. It is affiliated with a number of institutes, including the New America Foundation, and is a member of the American Economics Association. The Institute has more than 500 individual members, including 120 Nobel laureates, and is supported by a diverse group of individuals and institutions.

In addition to its research activities, the Institute offers a variety of products and services, including conferences, seminars, workshops, and training courses. It also provides consulting services to governments, international organizations, and private sector clients. The Institute is a leader in the field of international economics and is a respected source of information and analysis on global economic issues. The Institute’s staff are experienced researchers, economists, and policymakers who bring a broad range of perspectives to their work.

The Institute is affiliated with a number of organizations, including the American Economics Association, the National Bureau of Economic Research, and the National Academy of Sciences. The Institute is also a member of the World Bank’s Global Economics Community, and is a partner in the World Bank’s Global Development Finance project. The Institute is also a member of the International Monetary Fund’s Global Economic Network, and is a partner in the World Bank’s Global Development Finance project.