The Peterson Institute for International Economics provides timely, objective analysis of and concrete solutions to key international economic problems.

"There is no institute anywhere in the world... that comes close to having the breadth and depth that the [Peterson] Institute for International Economics has in its devotion to international economic studies all over the world."

Stuart Eizenstat
Former Deputy Secretary of the Treasury and Undersecretary of State

"No one has led analysis and discussion of international economics like the Peterson Institute."

Tom Keene
Host of Bloomberg "Surveillance"

"...research institutes vary widely in both quality and honesty. Among the best on both counts is the [Peterson] Institute for International Economics."

Paul R. Krugman
Professor of Economics and International Affairs, Woodrow Wilson School, Princeton University

"The Peterson Institute does the single best job of think tanks in this town, hands down, of having the best audience. The discussions that go on here are tremendous."

Stuart Eizenstat
Former Deputy Secretary of the Treasury and Undersecretary of State

"[The Peterson Institute for International Economics] addresses, in a serious way, not only international economic issues, but how they impact people's lives in various economies. I commend you for that."

Thomas (Mack) McLarty
President of McLarty Associates and Special Envoy for the Americas during the Clinton Administration

"One of the things that has always astounded me about [the Institute] is they always have a book coming out about the subject that you just realized was important."

David Wessel
Wall Street Journal and Brookings Institution

"One of the reasons I've enjoyed being at the Peterson Institute [for International Economics] is that you find places that will now and then have policy proposals and some that do scholarship. It is very rare to find one that really combines the two in a very effective way."

Robert B. Zoellick
Chairman, International Country Advisors, Goldman Sachs & Company

"In terms of [the Peterson Institute for International Economics'] ability to shape policy discussion and influence the outcome, there isn't an organization outside government that can touch it."

Steve Pearlstein
Washington Post

"This is a really unique platform for challenging brainstorming and intellectual exchanges."

Antonik C. Samaras
Prime Minister of the Hellenic Republic

"I don't think there have been many institutions outside the government, if any, that have had the same kind of impact on global economic thinking as the [Peterson] Institute for International Economics."

Lawrence H. Summers
Charles W. Eliot University Professor and Professor Emeritus at Harvard University, former Secretary of Treasury and Director of the National Economic Council

"...the emblematic think tank of our time."

Jean-Claude Trichet
Chairman of the Group of Thirty, former President, European Central Bank, former Governor, Banque de France; former Director of the Treasury, government of France

"One of the things that have always astounded me about [the Institute] is they always have a book coming out about the subject that you just realized was important."

David Wessel
Wall Street Journal and Brookings Institution

"One of the reasons I've enjoyed being at the Peterson Institute [for International Economics] is that you find places that will now and then have policy proposals and some that do scholarship. It is very rare to find one that really combines the two in a very effective way."

Robert B. Zoellick
Chairman, International Country Advisors, Goldman Sachs & Company

"Washington's premier think tank on the global economy."

The Washington Post
The Peterson Institute for International Economics is a private, nonprofit institution for rigorous, intellectually open, and indepth study and discussion of international economic policy. Its purpose is to identify and analyze important issues to make globalization beneficial and sustainable for the people of the United States and then to develop and communicate practical new approaches for dealing with them. The Institute is widely viewed as nonpartisan.

The Institute attempts to anticipate emerging issues and to be ready with practical, useful and accessible formats, to inform and shape public debate. Its audience includes government officials and legislators, business and labor leaders, mass media, academic organizations, university-based scholars and their students, other research institutions and nongovernmental organizations, the media, and the public at large. It operates these groups globally from its base in Washington, DC.

The Institute's staff of about 60 includes 25 senior researchers, as well as a dozen non-resident fellows, all distinguished for their expertise on the major economies, industries, and policy experience.

The Institute's agenda emphasizes international trade and investment, international finance and exchange rates, macroeconomics and crises, globalization and human welfare, and area studies of key economic regions. Its staff have unique expertise on the major economies of China, Korea, Russia, the European Union, and the Middle East, as well as the United States itself and its NAFTA partners.

Current priorities include global supply chains and multinationals; the growing role of China in the world economy; globalization, inequality, and unemployment; the recurrence of financial crises; national and international financial regulations; trade negotiations at the multilateral, regional, and bilateral levels; and possible reforms of the international monetary system.

Institute studies have helped provide the intellectual foundation for many of the major international policy initiatives of the past three decades: reforms of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), including those initiated by the G-20 in 2009–10; adaptation of international banking standards; Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum and Trans-Pacific Partnership, the restoration and then extension of trade promotion authority in the United States; North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and other US free trade agreements (including with Korea notably); initiation of the Strategic and Economic Dialogue.

ABOUT THE PETERSON INSTITUTE FOR INTERNATIONAL ECONOMICS

The Peterson Institute for International Economics is a private, nonprofit institution for rigorous, intellectually open, and indepth study and discussion of international economic policy. Its purpose is to identify and analyze important issues to make globalization beneficial and sustainable for the people of the United States and then to develop and communicate practical new approaches for dealing with them. The Institute is widely viewed as nonpartisan.

The Institute attempts to anticipate emerging issues and to be ready with practical, useful and accessible formats, to inform and shape public debate. Its audience includes government officials and legislators, business and labor leaders, mass media, academic organizations, university-based scholars and their students, other research institutions and nongovernmental organizations, the media, and the public at large. It operates these groups globally from its base in Washington, DC.

The Institute's staff of about 60 includes 25 senior researchers, as well as a dozen non-resident fellows, all distinguished for their expertise on the major economies, industries, and policy experience.

The Institute's agenda emphasizes international trade and investment, international finance and exchange rates, macroeconomics and crises, globalization and human welfare, and area studies of key economic regions. Its staff have unique expertise on the major economies of China, Korea, Russia, the European Union, and the Middle East, as well as the United States itself and its NAFTA partners.

Current priorities include global supply chains and multinationals; the growing role of China in the world economy; globalization, inequality, and unemployment; the recurrence of financial crises; national and international financial regulations; trade negotiations at the multilateral, regional, and bilateral levels; and possible reforms of the international monetary system.

Institute studies have helped provide the intellectual foundation for many of the major international policy initiatives of the past three decades: reforms of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), including those initiated by the G-20 in 2009–10; adaptation of international banking standards; Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) forum and Trans-Pacific Partnership, the restoration and then extension of trade promotion authority in the United States; North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) and other US free trade agreements (including with Korea notably); initiation of the Strategic and Economic Dialogue between the United States and China, reform of sanctions policy, liberalization of US export controls and export credits, and specific trade issues such as permanent normal trade relations (PNTR) for China in 2000 and Russia in 2012.

Other influential analyses have addressed: economic reform in Europe, Japan, China, and Latin America (including with what became known as the Washington Consensus); the labor impact of globalization; foreign direct investment both into and out of the United States; international environmental issues and measures of pollution and of equilibrium exchange rates; and the sources and growth of services trade.

An outstanding example of the Institute's Board of Directors has guided the long-term strategy of the Institute throughout its existence. Peter G. Peterson, co-founder and chairman emeritus of the Blackstone Group and former US secretary of commerce, was founding chairman and remains on the board of the Institute. David G. von-der-Lohe, chairman and chief executive officer of United Technologies Corporation, is vice chairman of the Board. James W. Owen, chairman and chief executive officer emeritus, Caterpillar Inc., is chairman of the Executive Committee. The other members of the Executive Committee are C. Fred Bergsten, senior fellow and director emeritus, and Morris G. Goldstein, nonresident senior fellow and director emeritus, at the Peterson Institute for International Economics. Andreas C. Dracopoulos, co-president, board of directors, Stavros Nanchos Foundation; Jessica Einhorn, former dean of the School of Advanced International Studies at Johns Hopkins University and former managing director for finance and resource mobilization, World Bank; Carl A. Hills, chairman and chief executive officer of Hills & Company, former US secretary of housing and urban development and former US trade representative; Hutham Olajen, president and CEO, Olajen Associates, Inc.; Michel Coridon, head of Climate Risk at Credit Suisse; Peter G. Peterson Foundation; Lynn Forester de Rothschild, chief executive officer and president, E. L. Rothschild Limited; Richard E. Salomon, managing partner and Lawrence H. Summers, Charles W. Elsot Professor, Harvard University, former US secretary of the Treasury, and former Director of the National Economic Council; and John B. Taylor, former chairman of the Fed. The Peterson Institute celebrated its 25th anniversary in 2006 and adopted its new name at that time, having previously been the Institute for International Economics. In 2001 it moved into its new building, which received an Award of Excellence for Extraordinary Achievement in Architecture by the American Institute of Architects. Please learn more about our programs and research at www.piie.com.