The Chinese Economy: Prospects and Key Policy Issues

Meeting on Global Economic Prospects
Institute for International Economics, Washington, DC
April 7, 2005

Dr. Morris Goldstein
Dennis Weatherstone Senior Fellow, IIE
Chart 1: China's Real GDP Growth, 1992-2004
Chart 2: Investment as a Share of GDP
1979-2004E

Gross Domestic Investment

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 3: Consumer Price Inflation, 1990-2004

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 4: Corporate Goods Price Inflation, 1999-2005

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 5: Domestic and Foreign Currency Loans as a Percentage of GDP, 1998-2004

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 7: M2 Growth, 1999-2004

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 8: Growth of Imports

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 9: Real Effective Exchange Rate of the RMB, 1994-2005

January 1994=100
* After 12/2003, foreign exchange figures are adjusted to reflect $45bn transfer to SOCB.

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 11: Real Lending Rate, 2002-2005

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 12: Increase in Real Fixed Asset Investment, 1992-2004

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics
Chart 13: Expenditure shares of GDP, 2003

- Consumption: 44%
- Investment: 42%
- Government Non-Investment Spending: 12%
- Net Exports: 2%

Morris Goldstein
Institute for International Economics