

On the Funding of the Peterson Institute for International Economics

STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES

The mission of the Peterson Institute for International Economics is to identify and address the economic challenges of concern to policymakers in the United States and abroad. Our publications and recommendations are based on independent scholarly research, free of partisan or special interest biases. We believe that economic policies that advance responsible and sustainable global economic integration benefit everyone. The president and senior fellows of the Peterson Institute independently set our research agenda and evaluate the analysis and conclusions of any particular study and, ultimately, the economic policies our scholars advocate and criticize.

As an international think tank based in Washington, DC, we are proud to have a wide range of supporters including a large and highly diversified group of individuals, multinational companies, philanthropic foundations, and public institutions from around the world.

To fulfill its commitment to intellectual integrity and independence, the Peterson Institute adheres to the following principles:

Objectivity. The Institute's extensive evaluation process subjects all its research to peer review prior to publication, both internal and, for longer works, external. Authors must make all data and computations used in their research publicly available and allow for replication of results. Individual authors are responsible for their own views, but the Institute takes responsibility for subjecting their scholarship and writing to rigorous and consistent quality control.

Transparency. All sources of funding dedicated to a specific study are disclosed, along with any affiliations or consulting contracts of authors that are relevant to that study. This standard applies to all authors of any PIIE publication, including all external authors and coauthors. All authors must sign a transparency and disclosure form governing their identification with the Institute. A complete list of Institute supporters for preceding years, along with category of support given, is provided below. The list includes all contributors to general support and to our capital fund.

Diversity of stakeholders. The Institute's independence is strengthened by its reliance on a diversity of funding sources, including corporate support, foundation grants, individual donations, and support from public institutions in the United States and abroad, as well as income derived from our capital fund and publication sales.

Identity as a research institution. We are proud to be a think tank known for its scholarly integrity and for advocacy that is limited to the forceful expression of our individual scholars' research-based views. We adhere to the letter and the spirit of all applicable US law and consciously avoid any activities that may be construed as lobbying.

FACTS ABOUT OUR FUNDING

The Peterson Institute for International Economics is a private, nonprofit, nonpartisan research institution devoted to the study of international economic policy. Financial support for the Institute's operations is provided through donations and grants from corporations, individuals, private foundations, and public institutions, as well as income on the Institute's capital fund and from publishing revenues. We are proud to meet the market test of having to raise well over half of our funding every year.

Institute supporters vary in their level of engagement and financial contribution. Valuable support comes from donors at a range of financial commitments. Donations made at the $100,000+ level across all categories of supporters made up less than half (42 percent) of the Institute's overall budget for 2013 and 34 percent for 2014. Only 4 percent of total donations in 2013 and 2014 were made by supporters who requested that their gifts be publicly attributed as anonymous.

Over three-quarters of total revenues in 2013 and nearly 85 percent in 2014 were provided without substantive restriction, allowing the support to be used at Institute discretion in ongoing work programs rather than being earmarked for particular research projects. While some donor funds—particularly foundation grants—are restricted to support of individual research projects, donors do not influence the conclusions or policy implications drawn from Institute research. All Institute research is independent and held to strict standards of replicability and academic integrity.

All Institute Books, Policy Briefs, Briefings, and Working Papers acknowledge any direct funding sources, and web pages for these publications provide links to underlying data files or sources to allow independent replication of analyses. Author disclosures include employment, consulting, or ownership relationships with firms or public institutions that could be substantially affected by their research. This requirement applies to relationships that have been active three years prior to publication and includes all coauthors of PIIE publications, not just PIIE staff. Authors must also disclose any potential conflict of interest to the Institute that might arise as a result of leadership positions or board memberships in advocacy groups.

Funders are never given the right to final review of any Institute publication prior to its release.

Sources of financial support for the Institute have been listed annually on the PIIE website since June 2013. We provide annual listings for 2010–2014. Our list of 2015 donors and supporters will be posted in early 2016, after our fiscal year closes.
